I have come up with one idea that interests me enough that I would like to develop it further in this class. It is a problem I see with the world, that I think should have a solution. I also would like to delve farther into another of my interests, finding the cheapest thing.

Unbiased Politics: Not that there is such a thing... But as unbiased as can be possible. I would like to start a website which has information about politics in the US. It should and will have to start small, but hopefully grow, if it is successful. Just getting the information out is the ultimate goal. It doesn't matter if its only for one district in Brooklyn, as long as someone finds it useful.

Finding the cheapest thing: I love shopping and getting items at discounts. I love finding the exact thing that popped into my head but I didn't know if it actually existed until I eBay deep dived and found it. I think a service in which people can describe and item they need and have it to their door within a set amount of time is intriguing. They could specify if they wanted a vintage, used, or new item, whether they wanted it made only in the US or other countries, etc. and the service would find it and order it for them.

Next Steps: I need to learn a lot to accomplish this project. If we are talking communicating to investors to get them to invest in an idea, I need to learn how to write and communicate effectively and persuasively. I also need to learn time management and organizational skills. But I think that is outside the scope of this class.
